Trail Riders of the Canadian Rockies

BULLETIN No. 17

ANNUAL TRAIL RIDE: STARTS FROM END OF MOTOR ROAD, HORSE THIEF CREEK, NEAR WINDERMERE, ON THE MORNING OF THURSDAY, AUGUST 2nd, 1928

NOW is the time to make your reservations for the great trail ride to the Lake of the Hanging Glaciers. There is no more spectacular scenery in North America, and we are to have the comfort of the Camps of the Alpine Club of Canada which have been kindly placed at our disposal. The Secretary of that Club wires that there will probably be a base camp at the end of the motor road, but the exact site has not yet been settled. Those who motor from Banff will probably have to spend the night of August 1st there, as the Brewster Transport Company advise that the busses from Banff will arrive too late in the day for any riders to start out on that day, so that they will have to go the day before the official start and spend the night in camp. This may mean a slight extra charge for the Banff contingent. Those who start from Lake Windermere, however, will be able to leave the C.P.R. Bungalow Camp or Invermere Hotel the same morning, as Lake Windermere is a hundred miles nearer than Banff. The advance reservations are very promising, and as the number of horses available may be little, all those who intend to come should advise the Secretary as soon as possible. After July 1st, write to L. R. Crosby, Western Secretary, Trail Riders Association, c/o Brewster Transport Company, Banff.

HOW HORSE THIEF CREEK GOT ITS NAME

By TOM WILSON

In the first part of October, 1883, having packed in plenty of supplies to M. L. Davis' party, who was running location lines for the C.P.R. in the Kicking Horse Canyon, I drove my bunch of saddle and pack horses up to the Kicking Horse Lake (now Wapta), the nearest blacksmith, to have them shod sharp, as the ice was forming on the trails and sidehills and to be ready to pack the party out to the end of track as soon as the snow would drive them out. The C.P.R. were building the tote road down the big hill, and the blacksmith could only work at shoeing the horses between times of sharpening drills for the road work, so it took three or four days to have the horses shod. I had the saddle horses shod first and turned them loose on the snowslide above the Lake, Davis' horse among the first. When all were shod, I rounded them up to start for camp and found Davis' horse missing. As he was a camp pet, I thought he might have hit the trail for camp, and let it go at that. Two days to camp and no sign of the horse. I asked them if they had seen him, and Sailor Jack, our cook, said, "Why, three days ago there was a man and a boy passed leading a horse while we were all eating in front of the cook tent, and I said to Mr. Davis, there is a fine mate for your saddle passing gravel up on Canyon Creek for the last two horse, and all hands agreed." They had too long a start, and so I did not go after them. They turned south up the Columbia Valley and when opposite the mouth of Canyon Creek came across a bunch of ten or twelve pack and saddle horses. They took these along with them and made better time now, no longer afoot. After passing Columbia Lakes and wanting to go to the Coast, they crossed the river and made the attempt to cross the Selkirks, found a creek that from the valley seemed to head in a low pass and started up following an old Indian trail until it gave out —leaving the boy to herd the horses, the old man started to explore on foot.

Dutch Charlie and Jim Kane and Tom Wright, who had been months and made enough for a grub stake and had arranged to run trap lines up the Big Bend for the winter, came out to get their horses,—season was late and they were in a hurry—found that the horses were gone, but fresh tracks, so trailed them up, no guns with them—found where they had been driven across the river and followed up the Creek and met the old Dutchman and boy rounding up the horses, but the old man stood them off with his rifle. The thief could not get further west and the boys blocked the trail and sent one back for guns—when the guns arrived the old man gave himself up. They took him and boy down to Wild Horse Creek, will travel by motor cars part of the way and then by a good horse trail up Horse Thief Creek to the Lake of the Hanging Glaciers. Give a thought to the Old Dutchman and boy and the boys from Canyon Creek.

THE KANANASKIS DUDE RANCHE

Quite a number of our members have qualified for their buttons or brooches on trail rides from the Kananaskis Ranche, and we remember particularly the large party of girls, mostly from Philadelphia, who rode from this ranche to join the official Trail Ride by way of Molar Pass through the Ptarmigan Valley. Mrs. Bill Brewster, who operates this ranche, is an enthusiast on where Gold Commissioner Kelly would try the thieves. A bad snowstorm came on and the packtrain with winter supplies for the trading post from Sand Point was snowed in and not enough provisions in the country to do till Spring. When finally the trial came on and Commissioner Kelly asked the prisoners "guilty or not?" they pleaded guilty. Kelly looked at them in disgust and yelled "You d----- fools, why did you plead guilty?—sure we haven't grub enough to feed you all winter." He turned them loose.

What a change in forty-five years. This summer the Trail Riders of the Canadian Rockies the subject of trail riding. She herself has ridden all her life. The pictures on the middle pages of this Bulletin are taken from her private collection. During the few years of its existence, the Kananaskis Ranche has attracted to the Canadian Rockies many of those who love the outdoor life. The main building has a lovely outlook over the Bow River, and there is a delightful community room in which the guests foregather during the evenings. By day there is riding, fishing, polo, etc., with an occasional stampede to give the proper thrill. Dorothy Canfield, the famous novelist, is one of many distinguished guests who have spent their summers there.

MOUNT ASSINIBOINE IN WINTER

By the Marquis degli Abbizzi who operates the well known Dude Ranche visited by many of our members last summer.

When last October I was packing on horseback the two thousand pounds of food destined then for March ski-ing at Assiniboine camp, I did not realize that that vague hope would turn out to be such a success. If Assiniboine in the summer is the most picturesque spot of the Canadian Rockies, it would be hard for me to describe how much more beautiful that country is in the winter under six feet of snow. When our little party of skiers reached the top of Assiniboine Pass, the panorama that suddenly unfolded itself under our eyes made such a deep impression on everyone that for a few minutes only words of surprise and enchantment were heard. It was then that Mr. Strom, the well-known Norwegian skier of Lake Placid Club, expressed his conviction that even in Norway or in the Alps there could not be a more beautiful and ideal ski-ing spot than this. The atmosphere was limpid—the sky cloudless and blue—the strong rays of the March sun on the trees were projecting long blue shadows, contrasting with the whiteness of the virgin snow. The temperature below freezing, the absence of wind, and the warmth of the sun made ski-ing conditions ideal during that month. Those of the trail riders who last year made the trip to Assiniboine on horseback will be surprised how pleasant and easy it is to make it in the winter on skis.

To my deep regret, many people did not realize it, and that was one reason which made it so difficult for me to organize the first party to Assiniboine. The thought of a ski trip in March to the top of the Continental Divide, and to live there buried in snow for a month, was not alluring. Their timid minds were picturing expeditions in Alaska, intense cold, gales, blizzards, frost-bites, and all sorts of discomforts and hardships. The result was generally—a suspicious smile, and a positive No. Certainly nothing of this happened in reality. And the little party that just returned from a month of glorious ski-ing at Assiniboine unanimously agreed that it was the best ski-ing they had ever had. The ideal condition of the snow and the layout of the ground made it possible for even the less skilful skiers to enjoy runs that took about two hours to go up and three minutes to come down. The success of this trip was due partly to our excellent Swiss cook, Ernest, who kept our humor and moral high by means of gastronomic works of art, and to Charles Coyteaux, the Swiss guide, who devoted his entire time to our comforts. We first became acquainted with their service when after the first day of long journey on skis from Banff, we reached our new half-way cabin, where the two

Swiss had arrived the day before to prepare it. No one could appreciate the warmth and cosiness of that log cabin more than we, who had spent a whole day of vigorous exercise in the cold air. The dinner was ready and soon the whole party swarmed around the table. Belts were tight, eyes became groggy, and one by one we abandoned ourselves to the arms of Morpheus. The following morning the three dog teams arrived with all our extra equipment. We passed that day on the surrounding slopes which was a good preparation and training for our future ski-ing. The next morning we left the half way station and reached our destination in the afternoon. The first day at Assiniboine camp was a memorable one. Coyteaux woke us up early, bringing the hot water, building the fire, and urging us to get up as it was such magnificent weather. A snow bath followed, the bell rang for breakfast and we met in the main building; some on skis, some in moccasins ploughing through the six feet of snow along the newly broken passes. After breakfast a trip was planned to the "Towers," and in about one and a half hours from the camp we reached the most ideal ski-ing ground suitable to all: from the novice to the most skilful skier. The following morning we ascended the "Nub" peaks and passed all day there. We made numerous trips around the camp, always finding better places, better snow, longer runs, and when the time for departure arrived everybody was sorry to leave and expressed their desire to return the next season. And so, if I may express my modest opinion, "Assiniboine" has a big future in the winter, and some day, perhaps, will be one of the most popular winter resorts of Canada.
